Therapy's the place for massage

When it comes to aromatherapy massage you will go a long way to beat Therapy Skincare in Halifax town centre.

The salon has just won a top industry award for its massages using essential oils and it's all down to its clients.

They wrote glowing reviews about the ambiance, staff and massage treatments at the Rawson Street salon on Wahanda, the biggest and most respected spa, beauty and wellness website on the internet.

Wahanda recently started its own Wahandies awards. The awards are a chance for visitors to the site to reward their favourite spas, salons and wellness venues by writing a review about their experiences. The awards take place each month, and there are 10 up for grabs. The categories change each month so every treatment under the sun from tanning to waxing gets a look in.

The winners get a Wahanda badge to display on their website, a plaque for the salon wall, and a bottle of Champagne. "They are really prestigious award and we are thrilled to have won one," says Louise Jones who started Therapy Skincare almost seven years ago inside Toni & Guv hair salon, Halifax, and moved to Rawson Street when she expanded the business.

She works alongside three staff and says her four aromatherapy massages using Dermalogica products are really popular with both male and female clients. "We pride ourselves on offering our clients a high standard of care and attention and it's great to see they appreciate us," says Lousie who lives in Bradshaw, Halifax.

Therapy Skincare came top out of more than 2,700 salons across the country.
